

Pope unwelcome among Catholics in Holland

Bert Witvoet

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands — According to a survey published in Elseviers, a Dutch magazine, Pope John Paul II will not get an enthusiastic reception when he visits Holland in May of this year, even among Catholics. The survey was conducted in February, and covered 3212 homes spread throughout Holland.

The most telling answers came to the question "How do you feel about the Pope's visit to our country?" Only 3 % said they were happy; 27 % said it was alright; 43 % said they were indifferent; 24 % are opposed, and 3 % have no opinion.

These results came from the 34 % of those respondents to the survey who said they were Roman Catholic. Of these, 34 % said they were moderately conservative, and 42 % said they were moderately progressive.

Disagreements with Pope

Among several questions that ask an opinion on pronouncements made by the Pope, only two receive agreement from the majority of Catholic respondents: arms control and worship of Mary. A hefty majority is opposed to the following papal pronouncements: priests may not marry, women may not be priests, priests may not enter politics, birth control, abortion and divorce is not permitted. Most people also opposed the fact that the Pope has autocratically appointed conservative bishops who agree with the Pope's views.

The most popular pope according to the survey is John XXIII. The present pope rates only 9 %.

A surprising result shows that the Bible is considered the most important faith document by 52 %, with the Catechism and the Church Order falling far behind. According to Elseviers this is unexpected since in previous generations the Bible was an unknown book.

Survey confirms crisis

Archbishop Dr. A. J. Simonis, in a response to the survey, says that the results of the survey confirm the crisis of Catholicism in Holland. This situation has already existed for 15 years, according to him.

Yet Simonis questions the reliability of the survey. Some of the questions are too suggestive, he finds. Besides, the recent unpopular appointment of the bishop of 's-Hertogenbosch may have influenced the outcome.

The King's prof in international piano competition

EDMONTON, Alta. — A faculty member at The King's College has been chosen for one of this year's most prestigious international piano competitions.

Joachim Segger, 28, assistant professor of music at the college, is one of 40 pianists selected to play at the Bach International Piano competition in Toronto. Chosen by a jury on the basis of tape recordings, Segger will compete at the competition from May 1 to 12.

The competition in Toronto recognizes the 300th anniversary of Bach's birth, and the contribution that the late Canadian pianist Glenn Gould made to the interpretation and popularity of Bach piano compositions, Segger said.

The competition has attracted a great deal of international interest already. The 166 entrants represented 38 countries, more than apply for many other prestigious competitions.

Segger was one of six Canadians, and three Albertans, chosen to participate in the competition. Selection alone has been a boost to his career, he said in an interview.

"It's given me a lot of exposure I wouldn't have had otherwise.

"It's also a nice break, at my age."

Youth is an important asset in piano competitions, with people in their teens often being selected to play. But the average age of competitors at the Bach International Piano Competition is 28, which suggest that "maybe the music of Bach is better played by people who are a little older and have lived with the music a little longer," Segger said.

Group proposes debt relief tribunal

(CFFO) — GEORGETOWN, Ont. — A detailed proposal for a debt set-aside program was adopted at a special meeting of the Provincial Board of the Christian Farmers Federation of Ontario in early March.

The proposal calls for a formal process that will allow farmers to apply to a special tribunal for debt relief. The tribunal would have the power to grant debt set-asides for 3-year periods even if

Commitment to refugees

C.C. staff

OTTAWA — Flora MacDonald, Minister of Employment and Immigration, announced that Canada will participate in a new international program to rescue Vietnamese refugees in distress in the South China Sea. Canada's agreement to participate will make this program possible, beginning April 1.

"Canada has always taken a lead role in providing a home for Vietnamese boat people," said the Minister. "But I see this program as something more than just resettlement: it will save lives."

The Rescue at Sea Resettlement Offers (RASRO) program is designed to encourage commercial ships in the South China Sea to pick up Vietnamese refugees whose lives are in danger.

Although the number of people fleeing Vietnam by sea has decreased in the past several years, the proportion rescued at sea, when compared to total arrivals in refugee camps, has been declining even more rapidly.

Many merchant ships hesitate to pick up refugees for fear of having to resettle all of them in their home countries. This promise of resettlement by Canada and other countries — to a total of 2,500 people — will provide motivation for ships of countries which cannot resettle many refugees to rescue the boat people.

RASRO is being organized by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, and will provide resettlement for more small boat refugees. Canada will be one of 13 initial participating countries.

The King's surprised by grant

C.C. staff

EDMONTON, Alta. — The Alberta provincial budget for 1985-86 contains an operating grant of $300,000 for The King's College, much to the delight of staff and students of this institute. "We are thankful to God for providing us with this much needed government support," says President Henry Van Andel.

The money will help the college in its plans to reduce its indebtedness and to expand its program offerings. "We want to thank all the hundreds of people who contacted government representatives and officials on behalf of The King's," says Van Andel.

He added that people should not get the idea now that The King's is no longer in need of their support. The grant constitutes 20 % of the college's budget. The total budget calls for one and a half million dollars.

"The government grant is a significant new development for Christian post-secondary education in Western Canada," says Van Andel.

Canadian participation in Star Wars dangerous

It is disturbing to hear Prime Minister Mulroney talk about possible participation in the development of technology for US space-based weaponry. The idea of stationing weapons in space is a definite step into a new arena of armament. In the present climate of nuclear deterrence that is not a good thing to contemplate.

We are as a civilization saddled with the realities of nuclear armament. One cannot wish away the terrible instruments of destruction that both sides of the cold war have developed. Somehow we have to live with the risks attached to maintaining a viable defence system. Perhaps careful negotiating can gradually reduce the quantity of these weapons, but it is difficult to picture a time when we can safely do away with them completely.

That said, it is still important to curb any attempts at widening the parameters of the present situation. President Reagan seems to be prepared to do that on the assumption that only superior US strength can accomplish Soviet compliance. We believe that that assumption is foolish. US strength is important, but superior US strength is counter-productive.

Cooperation means responsibility

What makes Canadian participation in development of US weaponry risky is that we have no way of knowing exactly what is going on. The US government is not accountable to the Canadian parliament, obviously. That is as it should be. But that also means that a sovereign nation other than the US must stay somewhat at arms length when it concerns the development of US technology which may endanger the world. It's not a form of anti-Americanism to withhold cooperation from programs over which we have no control.

We cannot totally avoid depending on the good intentions of the US. We are friendly neighbours, and we have much in common when it comes to planning economic, military and other aspects of our future. Nor can we deny that Canada is more dependent on the US than vice versa. But it is our responsibility before God and other nations to hold ourselves accountable for our own actions and for those in which we participate with others.

To be truthful, we are not very comfortable with the sounds that have of late been coming from the federal Conservative government in the area of Canada-US relations. Canada seems too compliant and too eager to cooperate with the US in areas where we have no safeguards. And from the way it looks to us as we listen to speeches in the House of Commons and statements at news conferences, the motivation is economics.

Jobs do not justify

Prime Minister Mulroney told a news conference that he would be willing to consider Canadian involvement in research for the US Star Wars program if the result is the creation of new jobs. It is understandable that the Canadian government is concerned about the present rate of unemployment. But should an economic and social consideration like that decide the ethics of expanding an arms race that may eventually lead to the destruction of God's creation?

Mr. Mulroney's statement that "if somebody came forward and said, would we be interested in bidding for a part of a contract which would create, say, 10,000 jobs in Winnipeg-Fort Garry, I think we would have to take a look at it," sounds terribly insensitive to the moral questions that surround such a contract. Mentioning the riding of MP Lloyd Axworthy, who opposes the US program, is a blatant and tempting form of pragmatism.

External Affairs Minister Joe Clark put the icing on the cake when he compared opposition to research in space armament to opposing research on the bow and arrow. Cute but not very appropriate. If our government trivializes the development of anti-ballistic laser technology in space to the level of bow and arrow technology, we have ample cause to be concerned.

Fear those who are afraid

We acknowledge that President Reagan's attempt to draw in as much support from his allies as he can muster in the face of arms negotiations in Geneva is a sensible objective. Western unity with a reasonable defence is probably more effective in persuading the Eastern block to reduce arms than is the further escalation of arms. But combining the two — unity and escalation — will only frighten the Soviets into greater risk taking.

Those who ignore the fact that the communist system is built on fear, make a tragic mistake. Communism is dangerous enough as it is. But frightened leaders, living off a system of fear, are even more dangerous. To the blindness that comes from worshipping the god of dialectic materialism, fear will add the hazardous component of irrationality. And that might spell the end of civilization as we know it.

Sins of omission

In our March 1, 1985 issue we published an article written by the Rev. William Haverkamp which was a reprint from the August 22, 1961, issue of De Wachter. We should have indicated, of course, that the Rev. Haverkamp passed away during August 1983.

Last week we printed on the front cover of our Easter issue a drawing of the crucified Christ. We failed to acknowledge who the artist is. It is Eric Gill, English sculptor, draughtsman and writer.

Age of maturity is 20

In your January 18 editorial, "Welcome to stay and free to leave," I missed any reference to what the Bible says about the age of maturity, majority or (better still) responsibility for one's own deeds.

I believe that God Himself set the age of maturity (read: responsibility) at age 20, albeit in an indirect way. I base this on Numbers 1:3 "You and Aaron are to number by their divisions all the men in Israel 20 years old or more who are able to serve in the army," and on Numbers 14:29 "In this desert your bodies will fall, everyone of you 20 years old or more who was counted in the census and who has grumbled against me."

Even though some people mature early and some mature late (some people never mature!), an age of maturity must be set. Age 20 and up conveniently sets adults apart from teenagers and younger ages.

And although the ceremonial laws of the Old Testament no longer apply, I think that the age of maturity, as set by God, is and remains valid for all times. I therefore reject ages under 20 or over as the age of maturity, even though governments tend to go under 20 and away from the traditional age of 21 (which has no basis at all).

And I certainly would reject any argument that our young people mature earlier nowadays.

Swords are for men

Allow me to respond to two recent articles in C.C. First I'd like to thank

George Vandervelde for highlighting the significance of the role and office of a missionary, March 1. Not bad! It must be said though that if a missionary is to be equated with an apostle, his preaching, teaching and authority, I for one would not support women missionaries. The fact that "the Lord called women to that office" is in the view of many of us a subjective assumption, not borne out by Scripture. I am not talking now about missionary nurses and such.

If that equation be right, then many of us have been mistaken or perhaps even been misled. Then indeed we do have an inconsistency. The three reasons Vandervelde gives for it are probably right. I can rejoice with him for the families that have been brought from death to life. I have also heard of

Suicide not always an act of desperation

"The biggest problem in the world could have been solved when it was small" (Witter Bynner, 1881-1963)

"I have the perfect solution, pastor!"

"Oh?" I said, having an innate suspicion of all perfect solutions that do not originate with myself, "really?"

"Yes ... you know this constant debate in our churches and church papers about women in office?"

"Yes," I said, feeling the beginning of a headache, "what about it?"

"Well, the other day I saw this copy of The Banner. It had an article in it all about elections in the church and the way we vote. But what really struck me and set me to thinking was the picture on the front cover. You remember the issue I'm talking about?"

"Oh, you mean the one with the little capsules on the front! Little glass containers that have the names of all the eligible people clearly displayed! Yeah, I remember that issue."

"Then you'll also remember the purpose of those little capsules: they were all placed in a container, and then after appropriate prayer, the names of the chosen were drawn from the container. Casting lots, its called. People in the Bible did it all the time."

"Yes, I was aware of that," I said, "what about it?"

"Did you notice the names in the glass capsules, though?"

"Huh?" I said, in one of my brighter moments.

"They were all men! And that set me to thinking. See, what if we would from now on include the names of all eligible and capable confessing members, men and women, and cast lots."

He looked at me triumphantly, his eyes sparkling.

"And that's the perfect solution?" I said.

"You bet — it removes the whole business from bitter debate and acrimonious words, and puts it squarely where it belongs, in the hands of the Lord. He chooses, we pray that His will be done."

"You mean, if it is not the will of the Lord that a certain person is chosen, then He'll take care of the matter Himself? But, listen!, we still nominate people don't we? We place the names in the capsules or whatever ..."

He listened to me with an indulgent smile, like a father might regard a not too bright child.

"Of course, we do. But we will do it in the confidence that in a very difficult situation the Lord will show the way. Don't you have trust in Him, pastor? Don't you think that He knows who should serve? That's the beauty of it: even if we make mistakes, the Lord will correct us! Who knows, maybe no women at all, maybe 50 percent women and 50 percent men, maybe all women. We just place it before the Lord, and bow before His decision."

"So," I said, while I scratched my neck, "in your eyes people who would object to this would not really trust the leading of God — they'd be placing their own likes and dislikes above the leading of the Spirit?"

"Now you're getting the idea, pastor. I'd consider them liberals, for sure."

"Hmmm," I said.

case the possibility of forgiveness is even greater, for there is time to repent.

Whether or not a suicide is premeditated may or may not be crucial. I don't know that. It is unlikely that a child of God will coolly commit suicide, after examining all the alternatives, as you put it.

Does this explanation remove the confusion? The point of the editorial was to create understanding for the possibility that even suicide may not be able to separate Christians from the love of God.

Editorial criticized best Sunday-morning program

It is really too bad that we only think about writing to the editor when we have something to complain about. I really enjoy reading Calvinist Contact. It keeps me up to date with what is going on in the Dutch-Canadian Reformed community.

However, I was disappointed with your comments on the T.V. program "Day of Discovery" in the February 22 issue. We have watched that program for years now. We can just make it, before going to church.

If you want solid Bible teaching, there it is. The choir sings beautifully. It is the best program in the Sunday worship line-up. But, of course, that is personal taste.

What you are doing, is making it ridiculous, though. If you want to criticize, please, take something else. There is so much real bad television. And I know that not all TV preachers are preaching the truth. We have to watch that we receive the right instruction.

But if you take the time and trouble to listen to their program, or read their literature, you will know that Richard De Haan, Paul Van Gorder and Martin De Haan teach according to the Bible. By the way, they deal with a particular subject for four Sundays in a row, so you did not hear the whole treatment of it.

A paper like Calvinist Contact has a lot of influence on the minds of its readers. You have an awesome task. I wish you the Lord's blessing on your work!

Mrs. Hendrika Donkersteeg, Spencerville, Ont.

I greatly appreciated your editorial "Is there comfort after suicide" published in the February 15th edition of the Calvinist Contact. However, I encounter problems when you mention that the suicide "... was an act of desperation in a moment of extreme weakness and helplessness."

Firstly, I believe that this is a generalization and that suicide can sometimes be viewed in the same manner as "murder one." That is to say, it can be premeditated. In these cases the subject has supposedly examined all the alternatives and has elected to proceed with the suicide. Therefore, how can we say that this is a case of desperation in a person who does not know what he/she is doing? In such a case, I believe that the individual has clearly contravened God's commandment and should suffer God's wrath.

Secondly, if we accept your explanation (which is quite feasible) of an act of desperation, then should this not also apply to some cases of murder? There are many cases in which a person has arrived home to find his/her spouse in the arms of another and murder is exacted. Is this not a case of "an act of desperation," and yet is still considered a contravention to God's commandment?

Rev. Pols in the "Pastoral Pondering" of this same edition talks of dualism. Are we, as Christians guilty of that in this case?

As you can perceive, I am slightly confused with your article and would appreciate your comments/answers to my query.

Response

To address your first question, in my editorial I was not making a general statement intended to cover all forms of suicide. I limited myself to suicide committed by a child of God who finds him or herself in a state of depression. But even in that case, I said earlier in the editorial, we cannot argue away the fact that suicide is sin. Whether that means that the sinner should suffer God's wrath depends on whether Christ has paid for the sin.

Secondly, if a person in an act of desperation kills another person, the same laws of the Kingdom apply. It is a sin, but not an unforgivable one. In this homosexuals lifting up the Lord Jesus Christ in their preaching, and again I rejoice. As Paul said in Philippians 1:18, "Notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretence, or in truth, Christ is preached; and I therein do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice."

In existential thought the purpose justifies the means, but I do not agree. The three reasons for the inconsistency are also three mistakes. We should not make even bigger mistakes, as V. advocates. Rather, let us heed the Word in Canticles 2:15, "Take us the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vines." Should we let them get any bigger?

Secondly, Ken Baker's suggestion for structured sermon discussion is an excellent one, March 15. I'd like to add that it would make our services more practice continued in the N.T. church (1 Cor. 14:29-33). In those days there apparently were no seminaries, but young men learned to handle the sword of the Spirit in those worship services and thus got tested (1 Tim. 3:10 and 1 Cor. 14:34,35).

Native gardeners requested for North West Territories

WINNIPEG, Man. (MCC) — The Arctic Circle seems like an unlikely place to plant a garden, but the Mennonite Central Committee has received a request for a summer gardener for Fort Good Hope, a community located in Canada's North West Territories.

"A lot of people would like to make gardens, but we just don't know how to do it anymore," community leaders told Native Concerns coordinator Menno Wiebe during a February visit. Wiebe told them that MCC Canada will try to place gardeners in Fort Good Hope this summer.

Although gardening has occurred in the far north, many communities, comprised mainly of hunting peoples, are unfamiliar with gardening techniques. MCC Canada needs 30 summer volunteer gardeners for projects in the far north, including Fort Resolution and Lac La Martre in the North West Territories, and for other native communities. Volunteer gardeners help community members to select good garden sites, test soils, select suitable seeds and assist in maintenance, food processing and storage.

Wiebe, in explaining the Gardening Project, says that the program is workable because volunteers work with, and not for, the people. "We don't make model gardens in order to show people how to do it," he says. "We work with the people."

He goes on to say that summer gardening is a challenging Christian service opportunity. "The church is often written off in the north because people consider it irrelevant and domineering," he says. "Summer gardening shows that the church is concerned with practical needs and that it wants to work in partnership."

Volunteers are needed from all age groups; Wiebe emphasizes that the program, now in its eighth summer, isn't restricted to college-age volunteers. "Senior volunteers have been heartily welcomed by native communities," he says. "They've made a substantial contribution." He adds that age is respected in native culture.

Interested individuals are encouraged to apply as soon as possible. The summer gardening orientation takes place May 6-10 in Kenora, Ont. The assignments usually end in late August.

Governmental action on "war criminals"

OTTAWA (MCC) — The long-standing questions about whether individuals currently living in Canada participated in Nazi war crimes are now to receive more governmental attention. In early February the government set up a commission of inquiry to determine, by the end of the year, whether there are such individuals in Canada, how they got here, and how they should be dealt with.

Until now governments have tended to see extradition as the main legal provision for dealing with such people. But this method is difficult because it depends on very particular requests from other countries.

To rectify this, a new Law Reform Commission study says that Canadian laws should be changed so as to permit trials in Canada of those suspected of having committed war crimes elsewhere. Critics say that this would introduce a retroactive dimension contrary to the spirit of Canadian law.

The government, however, is prepared to consider it for certain "universal" crimes. Estimates about the number of people who may be affected range from 30 to 3000.

"Before his visit to West Germany so much spit had been released that there was no spit left when he came," says Simonis.

lending institutions were not co-operative. The lenders would be offered federal-provincial guarantees for 50% of the original debt.

"We have concluded that a debt set-aside is the best targeted assistance for those who need time to adjust to new economic realities," Tom Oegema, CFFO President said after the board meeting. The Federation says that the worst of the economic adjustment in agriculture is yet to come.

The Federation cautions that the proposal cannot help all those in difficulty. The Federation assumes that current bankruptcy and farm failure rates will continue to the end of the decade. They also caution that if their analysis of a worsening farm economic situation is inaccurate, the program may not be needed.

The Federation's proposal includes the following criteria:

- All mortgage debt be eligible up to a maximum of 40% of total debt;
- Maximum debt set-aside per farm enterprise of $200,000;
- Set-asides to be for a 3-year period with the possibility of a 3-year renewal;
- Farmers to be eligible when equity levels are 25% or less and the enterprise is experiencing operating losses.

The Federation is hopeful that the program can salvage those family farmers whose financial situation is worsening but whose equity has not yet completely eroded.

Letter-writing contest open to young Canadians

(Canada Post Corporation) — To promote the art of letter writing, especially among young people, Canada Post is sponsoring a letter-writing competition for youngsters aged six to 15 as part of its participation in International Youth Year.

The theme is "a letter to a handicapped child" so entrants can be writing to an imaginary person, or to a real, live handicapped person.

All around the world, young people will be writing letters to handicapped children: similar contests will be held in many of the 167 countries that make up the Universal Postal Union. This is International Youth Year. To put added emphasis to IYY, Canada decided to join the ongoing UPU letter-writing promotion. It is the first time Canada has participated in the competition.

Entries must be posted no later than April 30. Schools are being asked to send entries to the nearest Canada Post corporate communications office (check at your local post office).

The letter cannot be shorter than 500 words, but can go on and on if you feel inspired.

Each entry must bear the student's name, address, date of birth, as well as the teacher's name and the school's name.

One entry per student, please.

Now, about winning. Canada Post has nine divisions. A winner and two runners-up will be chosen in each division. They will receive a certificate and a 1984 Canada souvenir stamp collection.

Those entries will be sent to a national competition.

The winner of the national competition will win a home computer. That lucky person can then write as many letters as he or she wants without ever picking up a pen or pencil again.

The national winner will be honoured October 5 in Ottawa, on Universal Postal Union Day.

And that's not the end: the Canadian winner's entry will be sent to the UPU international competition. UNESCO will select the three best compositions worldwide. They'll receive medals. Five others will receive honourable mentions.

Press Review

Carl D. Tuyl

There was our beloved Joe, slightly befogged, like the best man who got lost and showed up at the wrong wedding. "No," he said. "Canada has not been invited into a Star Wars research partnership." The American Secretary of Defense had, however, invited all 12 NATO countries to take part.

Star Wars, by the way, will be the most advanced system of nuclear technology ever conceived. It would employ lasers to destroy enemy missiles in outer space. Some severely misguided people argue in favour of Canada's participation on the grounds that it would increase employment. In that vein one could also argue in favour of the return of the medieval black plague which would certainly improve the economic situation of the funeral industry.

The National Economic Conference received very mixed reactions in the press. Results, if there are to be any, must yet become visible. Probably in the coming budget. It is a fact that there was not much unanimity. Dennis McDermott, the hard-nosed head of the Canadian Labour Congress started the conference by lambasting business with a capital "B." We shall suspend our judgment on the matter.

Perhaps not so minor brouhaha evolved when Finance Minister Michael Wilson did some hop-sotch-triple-jump over parliamentary protocol and announced to the Economic Conference the planned date for his budget. In protest the Liberals did a number of bell-ringing: calling for a motion and then not showing up for the vote. Not your really sophisticated opposition manoeuvre, but indeed very irritating.

Our most energetic Energy Minister Pat Carney met with her provincial colleagues in Vancouver. No agreement on energy pricing resulted, and unanimity was the impossible dream.

Just by the time we all let our collective sighs of relief when the letter carriers settled their dispute with the Post Office, here comes this unheard of little union of postal workers — 1800 strong — who threaten to bring our country into chaos. A plague on their house, and may the fleas of a thousand tomcats take up residence in their blankets.

The Canadian dollar experienced an encouraging rise against the American dollar and the bankrate came down significantly. American multi-nationals such as G.M. and I.B.M. report loss of income as a result of the inflated American dollar. Perhaps more than anything else, this will bring the Yankee dollar to less elevated levels.

Our government as you can read for yourself is still consulting, and not producing much of a legislative program. Trudeau's participatory democracy has finally come to pass, and look who did it.

President Reagan got his MX missiles, $1.5 billion worth of them. These little thing-a-ma-dings replace the Minuteman missiles. The latter had only three warheads, the former, a new and improved version, has 10 warheads. They will be sitting ducks for Soviet attacks because they are going to be positioned in the old Minuteman silos of which the Russians know the very exact location. The Soviets don't even have to change the target mechanism on their own nuclear toys.

The president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, a man who does no evil, was arrested by the South African police while walking in a non-violent protest march. The apostolic writing to the Galatians is applicable to the South African apartheid situation: "Do not be deceived: God cannot be mocked. A man reaps what he sows..."

Iranians and Iraqi's manage to continue in killing each other. The dry season has come and in the words of II Samuel 11 it is that time again "when kings go off to war."

Before I in conclusion report some of the more comic news I want to reward the prize of the week to Revenue Minister Perrin Beatty who is to be commended for his valiant efforts to put a more human face on the tax department. One round of applause for the Honourable member!

Now then... Mrs. Mulroney does not get too stingy when it comes to shoes. Recently on a shopping spree with Corinne Levesque she bought a couple of eelskins for $300 a pair. And in Dunedin, New Zealand it was proven again that if you don't succeed at first you must try again: a woman there gave birth to a daughter after bearing 14 sons.

With that in mind I have started a weight reduction program and am down to almost a shadow of my former self: 12 pounds less.

A retirement letter from the past

March 28, 1912

Mr. Rupert S. Murray, Chairman
White Star Steamship Company
Pier 37
Liverpool

Dear Mr. Murray:

This letter puts into writing the resignation I regretfully submitted to you in person yesterday. I feel the greatest loyalty to the company and wish to express my gratitude for the encouragement given to me throughout the years of my advancement from Cabin Boy to Chief Engineer.

As you know, I had planned to retire following my next tour of duty at sea. However, the personal circumstances we discussed make it impossible for me to assume those duties when the ship sails next week. It therefore seems appropriate to move the date of retirement forward to April 1, 1912, to correspond to the present situation.

My regret concerning this action is all the stronger for my being unable to participate in the maiden voyage of the newest in a long line of illustrious passenger ships. I had been looking forward to having my final tour on "the engineering marvel of the century." Although I will be unable to be on board, my spirit will be with the Titanic when she sails from Liverpool next week.

With my sincere thanks,

Oliver P. Dewhurst

Pastoral Pondering

Would you steal a Bible?

Peter W. De Bruyne

How many Bibles do you have? And have you ever had any of them stolen? You think that's a strange question?

An itinerant preacher in China had just one small New Testament. I will let him tell you what happened to it when he visited a group of believers in a house church:

Most of the worshippers were young people. One young lady asked in a friendly way if she could have a look at my New Testament. She hardly finished speaking when she reached out and grabbed it. Claspng it with both hands, she cried out very emotionally. "You'll let me keep it, won't you?" I tried to make clear to her that this New Testament was my only Bible, and that I needed it for my ministry. And while I was still talking to her, a young brother came suddenly up from behind her, reached over her shoulder, whipped the New Testament out of her hands and vanished into the darkness. I later learned that he was a new convert to Christianity, a university graduate, and someone who longed day and night for the Word of God. This was the first time he had seen the Word. And the temptation was too great.

Imagine something like that happening here? Did you ever hear or read about such thieves in Canada? Has anyone ever grabbed a Bible out of your hands out of hunger or thirst for God's Word?

Of course, I know we have no Bible thieves in our society because this land is full of Bibles. No, there's no need for anyone in North America to steal the Scriptures. God's Word is available in every corner of this continent.

But what would people do if this were not so? How many would try to steal a Testament if they were actually deprived of being able to read their own Bible?

There is a Chinese proverb which says, "Starvation stirs the heart to steal." I thank God that in North America nobody needs to steal a Bible. But I also pray that we may suffer a bit this extreme hunger and thirst for the Word of Life which stirs some of our fellow believers to steal a simple New Testament. And I hope that all of us will be more faithful in our God-given task to make His Word more accessible to all who seek Jesus — in China, and in every other nation on earth.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — Jesus said it a long time ago, "The harvest is plentiful, but the labourers are few." To His mind, the challenge was not a lack of people interested in the Gospel, rather, it was finding enough Christians to go out into the world.

Many Christians today lament the fact that we have become keepers of the aquarium instead of fishers of men. Recent statistics from an organization called Church Growth Services of South Bend, Indiana tell us that only 15% of all Protestant churches in America are growing. In the 15% that are growing, 85% of the growth is biological and transfer growth. Only 15% of growth is through evangelism.

Recently, a pastor wrote, "When it comes to evangelism, I have found it extremely difficult to motivate people... It seems that so many have the idea that only the pastor has to evangelize, while they stand on Continued on page 7...

Christian theatre active in Britain

LONDON — Britain is proud that so many people all over the world look to London as the major centre for theatrical activity. In this country, theatre sets a standard that affects all the performed arts — television, opera, ballet. But some, who feel justly proud of British production and acting standards, feel much less pleased with the content of many contemporary British plays.

Aware that it is more sensible to create an alternative than merely to criticise, they are pleased that there has emerged onto London's West End theatre scene a professional company called Aldersgate Productions.

Aldersgate has as its avowed aim "the provision of first class professional theatre which will convey Christian truth in such a way that it entertains, enlightens, educates and can open the door to faith." The company has a strong backing from all the mainstream churches in Britain.

It has produced eight West End shows, the latest being a co-production of C. S. Lewis's well-known classic "The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe" which was a sell-out during the Fall and Christmas of 1984. Jack Kroll of Newsweek picked it out as one of the outstanding Christmas shows in London.

In April, Aldersgate will be embarking on its ninth production, and perhaps its most important. It is a play about St. Paul called "Man of Two Worlds."

Says a spokesman for Aldersgate Productions, "It takes one of the greatest and most fascinating people who ever lived, whose life profoundly affected the history of the world, and portrays his emergence, not just as a Jew or a Roman, but as a man for the whole world. A man, indeed, whose life shook the very foundations of the Roman Empire and opened up the world for Christ. A man whose struggles, triumphs, persecution and eventual martyrdom have never been portrayed more vividly than in this new play."

Its author, Daniel Pearce, an American working in Britain, is an Anglican priest. He has become known in this country for a much acclaimed play about C. S. Lewis called "Song of the Lion," which Aldersgate produced five years ago. He won the Play of the Year award in Zimbabwe in 1972 and 1974, and in England the Radius prize for Best Play of the Year. Last year he was awarded first prize in the Catholic Stage Guild competition.

The director, Bernard Hopkins, and the designer, Robin Don, are both wellknown in North America and Britain.

The cast will comprise leading British actors.

The Aldersgate Council of Management hopes to attract some of the large numbers of North Americans who will be vacationing in Britain this year. The production will open April 25th at the Westminster Theatre and continue through November (when "The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe" returns for a season). Westminster Theatre lies around the corner from Buckingham Palace.

Aldersgate is offering seat discounts to readers who bring with them a copy of this article. The Management Council believes theatre-going "is an important facet of experiencing Britain." Christians will appreciate the production, they believe, and "receive a warm welcome to a wonderful play."

The Holocaust

Jacob Kuntz
From a friend I received a copy of the December '84 issue of Ecumenism, a quarterly publication of the Canadian Centre for Ecumenism.

This particular issue deals with the dialogue between Christians and Jews and also contains a short article about the Holocaust (the extermination of six million Jews by the Nazis during the Second World War), under the title: "Commemorating the Holocaust as Christians." How do Christians remember the ugly events that took place? We don't have to agree with every sentence in order to have appreciation for the sensitive way in which those events are placed before the Christian conscience. Part of the article follows:

To commemorate the Holocaust requires us to strive to take cognizance of the apocalyptic dimension of that tragedy. The Holocaust was the systematic execution of three times the population of Greater Montreal. Murder statistics in our local newspapers tell us that one person in nine hundred in Montreal becomes a murder victim. The Holocaust was six million murders, murders preceded by humiliation, degradation, torture and sadistic cruelty. Motion pictures and television have revealed some of the horrors of this living hell to us, but we still find it hard to imagine its full reality. Commemorating means trying to actualize ...

Commemorating the Holocaust as Christians means accepting our share of responsibility for this inhumanity, our share of responsibility for the inaction and the indifference of those men and women who were the passive witnesses of that genocide. It means accepting our share of responsibility for the silence of the churches when the trains of cattle-cars and the overcrowded trucks carried off our Jewish brothers and sisters to the ovens of Auschwitz, Buchenwald, Terezin, Treblinka and Dachau, to name but a few of the death camps.

Every Good Friday, Christians keep silence before the cross on which hung the One who died for their sins. This commemoration is a call to conversion, a call to banish sin from life forever. Today, when Christians stop to commemorate in silence the Holocaust, they are called to rid themselves of every form of contempt, hatred and indifference toward their neighbour, so that such a hecatomb may never again occur in our human history.

The same subject was discussed in the Mennonite Brethren Herald of February 8, 1985, in connection with the Ernst Zundel case. As our readers know, Ernst Zundel, a former German citizen, had to appear in court for spreading the view that the Holocaust never happened and was nothing else but a Zionist hoax. (The same views were defended by Jim Keegstra of Alberta).

Is it right that a person who holds and spreads certain views concerning a historical event like the Holocaust is tried in court?

Hear what the editor of the Herald has to say:

The case is very troubling. It is troubling because people who have already experienced terrible atrocities are being called on to try to prove what history has already proven beyond any reasonable doubt. They are testifying in a court of law not because Ernst Zundel could not know the truth, but because he does not want to know the truth. Ernst Zundel should be tried on his definition of truth and on his willingness to follow the truth once it is known. His trial is troubling because of his perverse unwillingness to hear truth given by many witnesses.

A society should always be open to people who hold peculiar views. We ourselves hold views about God and Jesus Christ which are not shared by many others. But some fundamental principles we do hold together with others, principles which have much in common with a Judeo-Christian worldview. They are that truth can be known and that no one can reject another for racial reasons.

Ernst Zundel's writings violate all standards of ethical behaviour and racial fairness. It is sad indeed that he should be allowed to have the benefit of a court to try to disprove what history has so well documented, or that victims of that suffering should be made to relive it for his sake.

Ernst Zundel stands as a warning to us that even the plainest truth need not be believed if we don't want to receive it. It must grieve the heart of God and it should grieve ours too.

Domed stadiums and hungry people

The United Church Observer often calls attention to social issues and to the plight of the poor. Hugh McCullum, in his "Observations" (March '85 issue) points to the fact that thousands of people in this affluent country cannot feed themselves; there are, he says, 37 foodbanks in B.C., 10 in Alberta, four in Saskatchewan, three in Ontario and one in Quebec. (We would not be surprised if in fact that number of the sidelines and cheer him on."

"From the perspective of my teaching," says Reformed Bible College (RBC) Assistant Professor of Evangelism and Missions, Dr. Richard Hertel, I have some encouraging news. The harvest is indeed ripe and, believe it or not, I have found an abundant pool of willing and enthusiastic labourers. This spring my RBC evangelism class is the largest it has ever been. What God has done in the Grand Rapids area through these students is nothing short of spectacular."

Normally, spring is not a good time to have a large evangelism class, Hertel explains. Most churches are well along in their normal seasonal activities and it is difficult to make room for a whole new platoon of evangelism recruits midstream. Hertel's evangelism class consists of 37 students representing six nationalities.

Some are still in the process of refining their English skills. Each student recruited at least one prayer partner. Over a period of three weeks most of the students were placed. "After we exhausted our list of training opportunities and still had a few students left, we went back to the Lord to ask Him where to go," says Hertel. "Within days a church called us and asked if there were any students at RBC who needed a place to do some evangelism training. That took care of the remaining need. Everyone had a place to train."
"So far this spring, after four weeks in the field sharing our faith, we have seen 23 persons make a profession of Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour. This number includes several entire households that have come to the Lord. Our class, with its size and diversity, is involved in one of the most abundant harvest seasons I can recall," says Hertel enthusiastically.

A few things Christian schools cannot do

1. Christian schools cannot be a substitute for a quality home environment. The number one training influence in the life of a child is his or her home. A parent, more than teachers and preachers combined, are the "pattern makers" for Christian living, attitudes toward life, attitudes toward others, work ethics, basic manners, money management, health habits, manner of speech, goal setting and study habits.

2. Christian schools cannot guarantee a perfect school environment. Some parents are unrealistic about other students in their child's Christian school. They expect a degree of perfection among mortals that simply is not attainable on earth. I am sure you have heard it said that "If you find the perfect church-don't join it-you will ruin it."

Christian schools are decidedly better than the secular public schools alternative but they are not perfect. Students come to the Christian school with varying degrees of spiritual maturity.

There is a wide variety of intellectual ability, emotional development, home training and personality patterns among the students in any school, including the Christian school. The typical Christian school setting is not the "sheltered environment" that critics make them out to be.

3. Christian schools cannot increase the level of your child's intelligence. It simply is not true that we are all created equal. In the broadest sense, in a free society we are created with an equal opportunity. But God has fashioned each of us with varying degrees of intelligence, imagination and drive.

Christian school educators cannot, nor should they, push a child beyond his or her ability to perform. Children need a reasonable level of intellectual stretching and academic challenge, but caring Christian school teachers cannot perform nor should they attempt to perform "academic miracles" to please parents who may have an unrealistic view of their children's abilities.

Parents and teachers alike should know that a child's academic success in school is only part of the total composite of qualities that God can use to make a person worthy of our respect, love and admiration. Never judge a child's future worth to the world on his current academic prowess in school.

4. Christian schools cannot duplicate parental love and support. Most adults have forgotten the emotional stress we experience as children at school. The very nature of a school requires that it maintain an orderly disciplined environment if learning is to occur. The process of learning can be emotionally stressful and mentally stretching. Parents can greatly reduce the pressure of learning our children may feel by encouraging them, inspiring them and loving them.

5. Christian schools cannot replace the spiritual influence of a parent. Read the words of Moses in Deut. 6:6-9. These commandments that I give you today are to be upon your hearts. Impress them on your children. Talk about them when you sit at home and when you walk along the road, when you lie down and when you get up. Tie them as symbols on your hands and bind them on your foreheads. Write them on the doorframes of your houses and on your gates."

Christian school education is a major force for good in the lives of our children. It can be enhanced if the church, the home and the school are all on the same spiritual and academic frequency.

"One of a kind" writing series published by CSI

Christian Schools International (CSI) announces the publication of Writing Rainbow, a complete writing curriculum for kindergarten through grade six. In the words of CSI's director of publications, Dr. Gordon Bordewyk, Writing

Rainbow is "one of a kind." The curriculum was developed from the perspective that writing is a God-given gift that Christians must learn to use responsibly. Three key concepts underlie the teaching of writing in the series: students must have something to write, someone to write for, and knowledge of how to write. Thus, Writing Rainbow emphasizes prewriting experiences, authentic audiences, and composition skills.

At each grade level, a teacher guide provides background information, resources, objectives, detailed lesson plans, evaluation ideas, and follow-up activities. Each guide also includes 25 pages of tear-out activity cards to use for individual or group writing experiences.

Each student in grades one through six will receive a full-colour folder containing sheets for writing assignments throughout the year. The durable two-pocket folders are also a convenient place for students to store their papers.

Writing Rainbow has been extensively evaluated and field-tested during the past four years, and the new materials reflect the suggestions made by numerous Christian school teachers. The project was co-ordinated and supervised by CSI series editor Joan Stob. The books were written by Sheri Haan, Ben Boerkoel, Nancy Goeman, Nancy Horlings, and Karen VanLaar.

A folder containing a detailed scope and sequence chart for all grades, a description of the Writing Rainbow curriculum goals, and sample lessons and activities is available from Christian Schools International, Department WR, P.O. Box 8709, Grand Rapids, Michigan 49508.

Christian Schools International publishes textbooks, provides support services, and offers pension/insurance plans to approximately 400 Christian schools across the United States and Canada.

Chalkmarks

The importance of the visual in teaching

It has been said that 75-80 % of what we learn comes to us through the eye. All teachers are probably made aware of that fact during their years of training and yet we sometimes forget. Therefore, I was rather pleasantly surprised by what a boon to teaching certain concepts a simple picture used as a transparency had been. The diagram which I used was one that came to me in preparing a Bible study lesson on the Flood. The students were asked to find some important concepts about the flood as symbolized in the diagram (right).

Young people always seem to like puzzles so it wasn't long before they discovered a rainbow, a cross, an ark, a tomb, a flood, and flames of fire in the diagram. Then we discussed how Noah's flood was God's judgment upon sin and that the ark was His mercy towards mankind, but how this foreshadows an even greater mercy when His judgment was borne by Jesus on the cross. Christ's victory is symbolized by the open tomb, while the rainbow represents our hope in Jesus' merits, and the Father's promises, at the final judgment.

Obviously, several important concepts of faith were presented here. I was curious to see how well the students would remember these on a test about a month later. Amazingly, most of the students in grades 5 to 8 could remember almost perfectly the concepts taught. In comparison, the wonderful promise of a Saviour's coming which had been orally presented as the glorious meaning of Genesis 3:15 was almost completely forgotten.

This clear example of the importance of visual material in teaching Biblical concepts was reinforced by Robert E. Webber in his book God Still Speaks, Nelson Publishers. In a chapter entitled "Recovering Symbolism" this writer says,

"The nature of faith itself demands the transformation of supernatural concepts into visible images and symbols. Because no finite language can fully and completely express supernatural truth adequately, biblical religion and the church in history has always relied on symbolism as a means of communicating that which transcends the realm of the finite. The language of faith has always, therefore, been a language of symbols."

My classroom experience with the symbolism found in this simple transparency corroborates Webber's statement. Teachers of biblical truths at all levels may be reassured to know that what we learned at college is still true for today's media-bombarded generation, and perhaps be encouraged to try a few symbolic visuals to crystallize the meaning of things that words alone fail to convey.

ICSICS

Ideas to build with

It's amazing how ideas we plant at ICS in one decade will sprout up in a different form in another decade.

Today we received a letter from a person we have not known, Wesley Shannon, who told us of many discussions he has had in Scotland about ICS teaching with his friend Iain McGregor, who did some study at ICS in the early 70's. These discussions about Dooyeweerd led Shannon to use the ideas of sphere sovereignty in his master's degree thesis in Scotland in the area of Urban Design and Regional Planning. The title of his thesis is "Towards New Methodological Realms in Urban and Regional Planning." It's nice to know that ICS can make a contribution to urban and regional planning!

A similar thing happened some years ago when the late Professor G. Angus Hills of the University of Toronto became interested in ICS. He wrote a major article in the journal Landscape Planning about the way he used Dooyeweerd's theory of modality to organize and integrate his thinking about landscape architecture.

And that recalls the half-year study at ICS of Australian architecture student, Mark Williams. Mark was writing a master's degree thesis at the University of Western Australia and picked our brains for four months for his thesis on worldview for architecture.

And there was also the gifted Indonesian student Hotma Oppusunggu who studied at ICS from 1980-82 to get a Christian philosophical framework for his advanced study of urban planning.

The right kinds of ideas can be used by fertile minds in unexpected fields in God's creation. We're glad ICS can be used that way.

Assault: family, school and sport violence

A Law Reform Commission Study on Crimes of Violence

Stan de Jong

If you are concerned about our society's growing rate of violence, you should order a copy of the recently-released Working Paper 38 entitled Assault which presents the Law Reform Commission's tentative views on this serious national problem.

The Law Reform Commission was established in 1971 for the purpose of modernizing Canada's federal laws and making them more relevant and effective. The Commission is now in the process of drafting a new Criminal Code. Before submitting its final views to the Minister of Justice and Parliament, the Commission will take into account comments and views from professionals and the public-at-large across the country. There is no doubt that its final recommendations will have far-reaching implications.

A new approach

The Working Paper on Assault addresses the Criminal Code chapter on "non-fatal crimes of violence" which, according to the Commission, is in a state of "disarray."

Further, it is concerned with resolving fundamental conflicts such as the right to freedom of one's own body and the right to have the integrity of one's own body protected. It explores modern problems relating to "consent" to bodily contact in areas such as "medical treatment, contact and combat sports and consensual sado-masochistical sexual activities."

The Commission proposes a new approach to the law of assault which focuses on the "type" of assault which has been inflicted rather than on the "degree" of assault which is required by law as it presently stands.

Domestic violence

On release of Working Paper 38, Commission President Justice Allen M. Linden said, "Although in theory the criminal law is adequate to deal with violence which takes place within the family, in reality, most wife-battering, husband-battering and child abuse go unpunished."

Statistics show that violence in Canada has reached a level indicating a serious social problem. But, said Justice Linden, "much domestic violence goes unpunished due to difficulties of detection, problems of proof and general attitudes — not because of inadequate definitions of criminal offences."

The Commission President added, "the failure of the criminal justice system to cope with domestic violence is an indication that we have not been tough enough in dealing with such offenders — and have not recognized the profound ramifications this type of violence has on our society."

The Commission, therefore, recommends that the Criminal Code be amended to provide that violence occurring within a family be an aggravating factor justifying a greater punishment.

Should failure to report domestic violence coming to one's notice be a new criminal offence? The study states that mere changing of the law is not enough and that other approaches are necessary, such as: police training, setting up treatment and counselling services, providing shelters and refuges for victims, and seeking measures that encourage employment and income security.

Said Justice Linden: "Public education is essential to prevent such attacks from being viewed as somehow different from ordinary assaults and more 'acceptable' than 'ordinary' violence. Rather than viewing family violence as less serious than an 'ordinary' assault, we should treat it as more serious."

Corporal punishment of children

Section 43 of the Criminal Code, which provides a defence to teachers and parents who inflict corporal punishment on children, was carefully studied by the Commission.

Section 43 states that "every school teacher, parent or person standing in the place of a parent is justified in using force by way of correction toward a pupil or child as the case may be, who is under his care, if the force does not exceed what is reasonable in the circumstances."

After consulting with parents, teachers and school administrators throughout the country, the Commission concluded that Section 43 should be repealed as a defence for teachers, for reason that:

- the section institutionalizes the use of force within schools;
- apart from situations where force is used to prevent harm and not to punish, the use of force is never necessary — the ultimate sanction is not corporal punishment but removal of the child from the school;
- the abolition of school corporal punishment in most European countries shows that in those free and democratic societies, school discipline can survive without it — in short, corporal punishment is seen as neither necessary nor justifiable.

But what about punishment by parents? On this tough, personal and controversial issue the Commissioners were divided. Commissioner Alan Reid, speaking for the minority, said: "A total ban is called for, because the protection of parents who inflict corporal punishment, even for reasonably disciplining a child, sets a national standard that can only heighten the potential for abuse that resides in all of us." He added: "Prosecutors have sufficient discretion to block trivial prosecutions."

The majority of the Commission, however, did not follow this path of reasoning. Thus the Commission recommends the repeal of Section 43 as it pertains to teachers, but recommends that it be retained for parents vis-à-vis their children.

Violence in sports

There is growing concern over unnecessary violence in sports such as professional hockey and boxing. No wonder then that the Commission paid special attention to Canada's assault related laws and their enforcement.

Professional hockey is discussed, "as having been widely condemned for tolerating a brutal style of play which is dangerous to the participants."

Professor Patrick Fitzgerald, Senior Consultant to the Commission, offered some solutions: a) a general re-evaluation of the objectives of the sport, b) a re-education of the participants, c) a search for a humane and less destructive style of play, d) new rules and stricter discipline controls by leagues, e) public statutory commissions to regulate standards in sport, and f) more effective and vigorous sanctioning of violent acts by the criminal law.

Professor Fitzgerald provided the Commission with a memorable quote: "Although Canadian society normally condemns deliberate acts of violence and accepts criminal prosecution as the appropriate remedy — when the criminal law invades Canadian ice-rinks, it treads on unusual and maybe even sacred ground. It treads on thin ice."

The Working Paper concludes that no special legal measures are necessary for dealing with unnecessary sport violence exceeding what players reasonably consent to, stating: "We consider the solution to this social problem of sport violence to lie in essence outside the redrafting of our present assault provisions. It lies rather in a greater police and prosecutorial vigilance, in stricter enforcement of existing law and in less judicial tolerance and leniency for 'sports assaults.'"

The Commission does, however, recommend more imaginative approaches to the prosecution of intentional hockey violence including prosecution of coaches, management, team owners and league officials who directly or indirectly encourage and contribute to "brutal exhibitions."

What about boxing? Professor Fitzgerald explained that the Commission's recommendations penalize the "intentional" infliction of harm. If the recommendations became law, a special provision in the Criminal Code would be required to exempt boxing from the law's application. After all, the "sport of boxing is directly based on the infliction of harm and injury to others."

Enter Globe and Mail Sport Editor Paul Palango! During the consultation process, Mr. Palango made a strong plea for abolition of the sport of boxing for children 16 years and under because of the growing evidence of brain injury in this sport, the lack of research on injuries on children participating in the sport, and the inability of children to make a knowing and willing consent to go in the ring given the intensive pressure placed upon them by adults to compete in the sport.

Mr. Palango, however, stated that the prohibition should not be extended to adults at this time because conclusive medical evidence of the effect of the boxing sport on maturely developed persons has not yet been obtained.

The Commission, however, did not accede to Mr. Palango's recommendation, although it was felt that the important issues raised deserved continued public discussion and debate.

Working Paper 38 outlines the tentative views of the Law Reform Commission at this time. After taking into account more public reactions, it will present its final recommendations to the Minister of Justice and Parliament.

Copies of Working Paper 38 are available by mail free of charge from: The Law Reform Commission of Canada, 130 Albert Street, 7th Floor, Ottawa, ON K1A 0L6.

Bulkley Valley Christian High School dedicates new building

George Koopmans

SMITHERS, BC — On February 23 in 1983 the Bulkley Valley Christian High School facilities burned to the ground. Two years later, on February 2, 1985, the dedication ceremony of a new Bulkley Valley Christian High School building took place in the gym of the new school.

About 500 people were present at the ceremonies. Society members, students, staff and interested members of the community listened to a varied program of speeches, singing, and special musical numbers.

A time of frustration

Schoolboard president, Theo Bandstra, said in his message. "We have been a long time waiting to dedicate this building." He recounted the shock of losing the old school by fire. He told of the frustrations the Christian School board had experienced in acquiring a new building site.

About six different possibilities were followed up on, but these were either denied by the Town of Smithers, or rejected by the school society members. A change in the position of the Smithers town council, initiated by Mayor Carmen Graf, led to the purchase of the present Fulton Avenue property.

His final words were addressed to the students, whom he urged to look after the building. He also challenged them to make good use of the facilities.

Mayor Carmen Graf spoke on behalf of the Town of Smithers. He referred to his involvement in the acquisition of the school site, stating that since the time of the fire he had

No expression could adequately mirror the scene of destruction that greeted most Smithers residents that Thursday morning. become a Christian. This change influenced his stand on Christian education by making him sympathize with the efforts of the Christian community that chooses Christian education for its children. He acknowledged the contribution of the Christian School Society members in supporting two school systems, the private and the public. He wished the society well and encouraged them to continue to support the Christian school.

A student's view

Paul Koopmans, a grade 11 student at the school, presented a student's view of the happenings over the last two years, since February 23, 1983. Beginning with the morning after the fire, he mentioned some of the experiences the students had, while other facilities were being made ready for them. He mentioned how quickly they were back in school after the fire when portable classrooms were brought to the site of Smithers Christian School.

He expressed admiration for the teachers, who, he said, must have worked night and day to get everything ready. Eagerly students followed the proceedings for acquiring a new site. Finally, construction began on the new school site — and now: the proud occupation of a brand-new school!

Many helpful

Principal, Mr. Marinus Moeliker, referred to the experience of working in cramped quarters while sharing the space at Smithers Christian School. Many people helped out the staff after the fire. New learning materials and course outlines came from all over the province, from Alberta, and from Grand Rapids. He especially thanked the staff and students of Smithers Christian School. He expressed the need for Bulkley Christian High School to have more students.

A slide show showed scenes of the fire, of relocating at Smithers Christian School, and of the progress of the new school building in different construction stages.

To the glory of God

Following the slide show, Pastor Harry Bierman gave a meditation on I Corinthians 10:31. "... whatever you do, do all to the glory of God." He contrasted the Christian view and attitude with that of the secularism of our time.

Students unveiled a dedication stone, inscribed with the words, "Do all to the glory of God." The stone is now mounted in the student lounge.

Conversation with two journalists

Bert Witvoet

While my wife, two youngest boys and I spent two weeks in Holland during the March school break, I was able to visit with Editor of Friesch Dagblad Ype Schaaf and Trouw columnist Bert Klei (Bert used to be church editor of Trouw). Friesch Dagblad is a provincial Christian daily; Trouw is a national Christian daily. Friesch Dagblad has some 25,000 subscribers; Trouw has about 110,000.

The day I sit down with Ype Schaaf is only a week and a half after the "Elfstedentocht" (the "Eleven-Towns Marathon") took place. Friesch Dagblad was deeply involved in this exciting event, as it gathered news and pictures and allowed other national papers to use its facilities. It took Schaaf and his co-workers one day to publish a pictorial account of the event and have it on the shelves of the bookstores! The publication proved to be a little goldmine for the paper, Schaaf confided.

Distinct paper

"What makes Friesch Dagblad a Christian paper?" I ask Ype Schaaf. We're comfortably ensconced in his office with a cup of coffee that a machine produced for 10 cents.

Schaaf explains that his paper is in favour of Christian schools, Christian political parties and other Christian organizations. Editorially F.D. supports CDA (the Christian Democratic Action Party), but it respects other witness parties who do not join in coalitions. According to Schaaf, the paper is "less sensational than the Leeuwarder Friesch Dagblad stands out from other dailies. It does an excellent job covering Saturday sports, but it barely touches Sunday sports. Although Schaaf admits that the more important matches cannot be left out even in his paper; the readers would not go for that. With its policy not to publish on Sunday or even work on Sunday, F.D. hopes to encourage Sunday observance.

We must show Christianity

One of the greatest challenges for a newspaper, according to Schaaf, is to meet the expectations of a reading public that no longer believes in mere words. "There are too many empty words in this world today," he says. "There are more lies now than there used to be. Just think of Nazi Germany, Communism, American policies, South Africa, Latin America."

Schaaf mentions a second complicating factor: television. "The orator does not succeed on TV; only the man who is what he says comes through as reliable."

"I am not a social gospel guy," says Schaaf, thinking perhaps of his Reformed audience in Canada. "But we have to show what Kuyper said about every inch of life."

Must teach again

I ask him if he is concerned about the trend toward individualism and secularism in what we still think of as Calvinistic Holland. "Yes, I am. If we go on with radical individualization, life will become a hell in this face death. The death announcements have a grey border."

Ype Schaaf (r.) in conversation with Bert Witvoet

Not that Schaaf wants to encourage simplistic thinking about these matters. He is not one hundred percent against abortion, and his parents both requested passive euthanasia. Nor can you change a homosexual, he says. "My question is, 'Is your relationship a triangle — you, your friend and God?'" Schaaf wants Christians to think with nuances. The greatest commandment is still, love God and neighbour, he finds.

Urban religion in decline

From Leeuwarden to Amsterdam is only an hour and a half drive by car, but the spiritual distance is 15 years. Ype Schaaf had told me. This was more or less confirmed by Albertus Johannes Klei, columnist of the Christian daily that emerged from the Second World War as an underground paper which refused cooperation with the Nazis. (Hence the name "Trouw," which means faithfulness. In Reformed Holland that meant faithfulness to God and the House of Orange).

Institutionalized religion in the urbanized sector of central-west Holland is on the decline, says Bert Klei. "What used to be a homogeneous church has now become a modality church (he is speaking of the Gereformeerde Kerken, sister church of the Christian Reformed Church in North America). There is no unified lifestyle. I am already happy if a hundred people show up in church."

I ask Klei what he thinks of the conformity to the world that seems to characterize so many young people who no longer attend the church of their parents. "It all depends what you mean by world conformity," he answered. "I know a fellow who is crazy about the Saviour and the Telegraph (a sensational rightist paper comparable to the Toronto Sun). According to me, this man is conforming to the world. Yet he claims to be very concerned about the church. Some say we should not put our trust in cruise missiles. That would mean conformity to the world. Others express their faith in Sunday school verses. I can respect that too."

Where does Trouw stand?

Trouw used to be a strong supporter on the A.R. party (the Anti-Revolutionary party that went out of existence in the seventies, when it joined another Reformed party and a Catholic party to become the Christian Democratic Action party). The most Klei can say about Trouw's present political colour is that it tends to favour the IKV (not a party but a peace movement), but it certainly is not dogmatic about it.

What is difficult to

"But doesn't reporting require a certain perspective?" I ask. "And don't you also comment on what's happening?" Klei points out that Trouw tries to speak up for the oppressed. It seeks righteousness in the world. The reason the paper is more critical of South Africa than of Russia is because discrimination is done in the name of the church and Christianity. A little earlier in the conversation Klei had already voiced his concern about the fact that Christianity has such a bad reputation. That bothers him. "We must be a salting salt," he had added.

But Klei does not swallow what passes for a lot of leftist or rightist stuff. Commenting on the trend in The Netherlands to support the Sandinistas, he remarks in his characteristically graphic way, "It almost looks as if Nicaragua has become the Holy Land." A little later he comes out with a similar comment on the tendency of fundamentalist Christians to glorify Ronald Reagan.

"The death announcements have grey borders."

comprehend for Reformed people who immigrated to Canada is that some of the editors of Trouw have no specific confessional stance. Some are not even believers! The confessional character of the paper is minimal, says Klei. We are a paper for people for whom Christianity and the church have not lost their significance.

"That is a pretty hesitant and negative way of stating a confessional position," I remark. Klei agrees. But then, he is only telling me how things are in his part of the Reformed world. "A paper reflects reality," he adds. We are a newspaper that reports on various streams within society."

Bert Klei reminded me several times that I was getting a lot of personal answers to the questions I was asking. I should not assume that he could speak for the paper as such. Yet, I got the feeling that what I heard was fairly indicative of the way things had developed in his neck of the Reformed woods.

Looking in from the outside

Both Schaaf and Klei had revealed in the interviews that a fairly wide gulf has developed between their constituencies and those Reformed people

Courant (F.D.'s main competitor with over 100,000 subscribers), and we are more stern on the separation of news and comment."

"Is an appeal to Scripture still possible in your daily?" I want to know. "Yes, it is," says Schaaf. Of course, there are differences about what Scripture really teaches. According to me, the policy of a man like Ronald Reagan is not Christian when the result of economic growth is 20 million poor people."

There are other ways in which country. Neither the Christian school nor the church teaches anymore. On the pulpits of The Netherlands questions are answered which the people don't ask. We have to teach again because Christians don't know anymore."

According to Ype Schaaf, society has become morbid. There is the pill to prevent life, abortion, euthanasia and nuclear armaments to kill life. Papers report on accidents, cruelty and beatings. "On the other hand, society is afraid to

... continued from page 11, who left The Netherlands for Canada in the fifties. The latter group had placed itself in a situation that would ensure a fair degree of isolation from the dominant culture around them. For that reason I felt like a person who was looking from the outside in.

I felt sad about some of the things I heard: how, for example, many young people from Dutch Christian homes no longer trust the institutionalized church, or any form of officialdom, for that matter. This reluctance to trust structures expresses itself in the widespread practice of young couples living together ("hokken") without going through what is considered a meaningless ritual of getting married in the church and by the state.

Many older people who also regret such developments, are nevertheless standing by their children. They don't want to lose them. And that is understandable. "Hokken" does not necessarily mean unfaithfulness to each other. Instead, it often is a form of idealism that perhaps one day will discover that the solution to hypocrisy and legalism is not the rejection of necessary structures.

Salt and light

Schaaf and Klei too are standing by their several versions of Dutch churches and institutions in the hope that they may still be a salting salt. Something about what to an outsider like me looks like a form of pessimism, tells me that they do not dare to think of themselves as a light on the hilltop. That might smack of pretentiousness. The emphasis in the mainline churches in Holland is on doing the will of the Lord, like salt, rather than on speaking the will of the Lord, like light.

To a critical observer that looks like an imbalance. Of course, the criticism sometimes leveled at the Canadian version of the Reformed faith is that it has no difficulty being a light on the hilltop but worries less about being a salting salt. That too is an imbalance, which should make us slow in judging others.

We must be much in prayer for each other and ourselves, that the Church of Christ on both sides of the ocean may remain faithful, and live and confess the full gospel of the Kingdom of Heaven.

Watching EO on TV

Bert Witvoet

Dutch radio and television has for many years had a Christian radio and television association (NCRV) which occupies a large chunk of broadcast time. In the last few years a second Christian broadcast association has been added to that: the "Evangelische Omroep" (EO).

Much to the chagrin of some NCRV supporters, the broadcast time of the EO has just recently been doubled, because it lays claim to having a required number of subscribers. This increase was possible because Dutch broadcast time is democratically divided according to the number of subscribers each association has.

The complaint I heard from several staunchly Reformed relatives was that the EO is too pie-in-the-sky, too much like spiritually standing on your toes, which according to sober Dutch people can't last. Said one, "I hear a lot of pious platitudes and certainties. If only you give your heart to Jesus, then everything is honky-dory."

I was not able to confirm those kinds of statements, although I did listen to one program. It featured an interview with a converted prostitute and a converted musician/actor who had played a role in the musical "Hair." Their story was heart-warming, I thought.

To have experienced the hell they had gone through and to have been rescued from a meaningless existence is no insignificant thing. As long as people realize that after their somewhat spectacular conversion the life of sanctification only begins, I see a lot of good in the sharing of their new experience in Christ.

What, according to me, saved the program from spiritually standing on toes all the time was the little commentary by a minister that followed the interviews. He said that he had enjoyed listening to the two people, but that it was not necessary for other Christians to have experienced a similar sensational conversion. He himself had grown up in the church and had believed from youth on.

"Conversion," he said, "is not the basis of salvation. The faithfulness of God is. There are twelve gates in the walls of the new Jerusalem, and many roads which lead to those gates. Likewise, the Holy Spirit has many ways in which He leads us to Christ."

I found the singing by different individuals high class: the lyrics and the music were contemporary, informal, joyful and liberating. I mention this partly because some people were offended at my editorial of February 22, in which I criticized what to me looked like a glossy performance in a North-American television broadcast. I'm not critical of all religious programming!

One question mentioned in the program particularly intrigued me: Whose possession are you? It was a simple question, but it went to the heart of human life. "Yes," I thought, "in the land of Abraham Kuyper it is appropriate to ask that question. After all... 'there's not an inch of life of which the Lord does not say it is mine.' " We need to know that the claim of Christ begins with the heart of each person. Sometimes Reformed Christians forget that.

And as long as EO sees this as the beginning of the life in Christ, Christians in Holland may rejoice that they have a second Christian radio and television association.

Marian Van Til Mask

Rated Parental Guidance

Stars Cher, Eric Stolz

Directed by Peter Bogdanovich

Mask is loosely based on the short, difficult life of a California high school student named Rocky Dennis. Dennis died in 1980 at age 17 of a rare deforming disease which caused his face to take on the appearance of a grotesque mask.

Rocky and his mother, Rusty, lived as part of a biker community, a motorcycle gang, whose members relate as an extended family. Rocky's "family" had long since looked passed his physical ugliness to the inside Rocky: bright, funny, good-hearted, sensitive. Others who met Rocky weren't always so charitable. But he learned to counteract their shock or rudeness with unexpected wit.

Mask is a brave film within a medium and in a time which glorifies physical beauty. It forces viewers to see persons, not images. It requires that not only of our perception of Rocky, but of his free-wheeling mother, their biker friends, and even of the (outwardly beautiful) blind girl who falls in love with Rocky.

Overall, Mask is not a very pleasant movie. It continually pokes away at prejudices viewers may not even have known they possessed.

The film's rationale for relating to our fellow beings with charity (no matter what their physical or emotional defects) is a humanitarian sense of the dignity of humankind. While perhaps a noble sentiment, that, in the end, gives the film a certain hollowness. It makes the Christian viewer overwhelmingly thankful that, by God's grace, he or she recognizes humanity as made in God's image. And it makes that viewer wish — and pray — that all others would recognize that too.

Some objectionable language.

Distribution of World's Christian Workers

GENEVA, Switzerland — According to the most recent edition of World Christian Encyclopedia, of all regions of the world, Asia has fewest Christian workers per capita. There are 285,421 Christian workers in Asia. By comparison, Africa has 431,321, Latin America has 253,712, and there are 1,059,742 in Europe.

The global disparity becomes even more evident when a comparison is made of the relationship between the number of Christian workers and total regional populations. In North America, there is one Christian worker for every 1,321 people, and in Africa the ratio is one worker for every 249,278 people. In Asia, however, the figure is one Christian worker for every 2,760,636 people.

An afternoon
colloquium
examines the nature of satire

OTTAWA, Canada — March 14, 1985: A colloquium organized in conjunction with the exhibition English Caricatures: 1620 to the Present will be held at the National Gallery of Canada on Saturday, April 13, 1985, from 1:00 to 4:30 p.m. A panel of satirical journalists, cartoonists and caricature aficionados will gather to lead an informal discussion on satire in Canada today. Does Canadian satire differ from that of other countries, and if so, why? Do the public media in Canada nurture or thwart the exercise of social and political satire? Does satire as practised by women differ from that by men? The participants will be Robert LaPalme, a distinguished caricaturist for several decades with the French Canadian press; Andy Donato, widely known for his Toronto Sun cartoons and his cartoon books; Jacques Guay, Professor of Journalism at Laval University and contributor to Groc; Roger Abbott and Don Ferguson, script writers for the Royal Canadian Air Farce; Erika Ritter, a radio journalist and social commentator; Richard Godfrey, an historian of

marijuana

Results from the annual Gallup Youth Surveys from 1979 to 1983 reveal a substantial drop in teenage use of marijuana and increasing teen support for penalizing its use. Most significant was the steady decline in usage — from slightly over 25 % in 1978 to a mere 8 % in 1983. Similarly, while nearly 40 % of teens polled in 1978 said they had tried marijuana at least once, that number was cut in half in the 1983 survey. Only 10 % of younger teens today report having tried marijuana. If current trends among youth continue, we can expect steadily decreasing usage in the future. Teens are also taking a firmer legal stance against marijuana usage, with 70 % recommending that possession of marijuana be treated as a criminal offense (as compared to only 46 % in 1978). And the number of teens who oppose legalizing marijuana has increased almost 20 % in the past five years. Marijuana usage appears to be highest in the eastern and western regions of the US, with the highest percentages being reported in large urban centres. White teens are more frequent users than non-whites.

foodbanks and foodkitchens was much bigger). At the same time governments do not hesitate to spend millions of dollars on projects that are at least questionable. We quote from his "Observations":

In Vancouver, at a downtown foodbank at Christmas, 3000 people lined up to get one of 85 bags of food. The faded lotus land on the Pacific has no money for jobless but it can spend millions on a covered stadium and the questionable Expo '86.

According to the National Council on Welfare there are 1,113,000 children under 16 who live this day in poverty. Foodbanks — phenomena of the 1890s provide relief from hunger for these youth, most still in their formative stage.

But, in Vancouver, they built a covered stadium and almost simultaneously social services, welfare, legal aid, human rights and jobs went down the drain. Toronto is right behind arguing where — not if — it will build its domed stadium for $200 million and rising.

Who benefits? I guess 65,000 sport fans, probably the professional athletic clubs, certainly the breweries and concession companies. There'll also be some short-term construction jobs.

Will the $200 million, plus government subsidies, help the 200,000 battered women in Toronto? The 360,000 poor kids? The declining day care centres? The decaying universities? Not likely.

I once asked a Methodist pastor in Chile why every city I'd ever visited in Latin America had a massive soccer stadium often right in the middle of a festering slum. "Simple, you divert people's attention from their poverty with sport spectacles. It works every time." I guess Canada is learning.

Probably someone will tell me I'm against good clean fun. Maybe, but somehow I think we should feed the hungry; and as the church we must also ask why they're hungry, not build them domed stadiums.

Afternoon colloquium

A reception will be held in the Centre Block, on Parliament Hill, immediately after the colloquium. A limited number of special invitations will be distributed at the colloquium before 4:30 p.m. 1/2

There was a tricky two-mover, a tough 3-mover and a difficult game position this month. Yet everyone scored at least 50%. Three contestants are almost at the top (90 points). Let's see whether we can get three prize winners in one month, (the first time in six years). New solvers are always welcome. Send for a free brochure explaining the rules.

Hoe moeten we getuigen?

De laatste keren in mijn Nederlandse kolom heb ik u deelgenoot gemaakt van enkele van mijn eigen ervaringen. Ik kan dat met vele andere verhaaltjes aanvullen. Maar dat zal ik niet doen. Ik ben er zeker van dat velen van m'n lezers een gelijk aantal van dat soort persoonlijke ervaringen kunnen vertellen.

Ik heb mijn ervaringen ook niet gepubliceerd om u te laten zien hoe gehoorzaam ik wel geweest ben in het getuigen. Tot mijn schaamte moet ik belijden dat ik vaak, ook door valse schaamte, verstek heb laten gaan en niet gesproken heb waar ik had moeten spreken, en soms wel gesproken heb waar ik beter mijn mond had kunnen houden.

Ik heb er alleen maar mee willen illustreren dat God ons nabij is als we gehoorzaam zijn. Ook om aan te tonen dat ons algemene levensgedrag een zekere geest moet ademen waardoor we een zekere bekendheid krijgen. Daarvan nog een voorbeeld.

Het speelde zich af gedurende de oorlog. In mijn kapperszaak had ik een tekort aan personeel en we waren elke dag drukker dan we eigenlijk aankonden. Eens op een Zaterdagmiddag, toen het erg druk was en wel tien of twaalf klanten zaten (of stonden) te wachten, waren er twee klanten, beide top figuren in de textiel industrie, die een gesprek begonnen. In de loop van het gesprek, wond één van de heren zich zo op, dat hij een vloek liet vallen.

Voordat ik maar zelfs tijd had om op te kijken en hem aan te zien om hem er opmerkzaam op te maken dat hij buiten z'n boekje ging, kwam hij onmiddellijk op me af en zei: Mijnheer Wolters, ik vraag verontschuldiging voor mijn vloeken, want ik weet dat ik hier niet vloeken mag.

Mijn antwoord was: Mijnheer, U mag nergens vloeken. Zijn antwoord was treffend. Hij zei: Dat weet ik, mijnheer Wolters, maar hier voel je dat het niet mag!

Met een dankbaar gevoel in mijn hart heb ik dat als een klinkend compliment opgevat.

Zoals ik al eerder schreef, het is niet mijn gewoonte om te "preken" tijdens mijn werk. We hadden ook geen bordjes aan de muur met het verzoek de Naam des Heren niet te misbruiken. Dat bleek ook helemaal niet nodig te zijn.

Onze levensstijl moet een Christelijke geest ademen. Of, zoals ik het in één van mijn andere artikelen zei: We moeten in de wereld leven, individueel en gemeenschappelijk op de condities van het Koninkrijk Gods en niet op de condities van secular humanism."

Als we dat goed in het oog houden, zowel persoonlijk als gemeenschappelijk, dan zal het ons niet half zo moeilijk vallen om onze houding te bepalen in politieke, sociale verhoudingen en wat dies meer zij.

Hoe onlogisch en onmogelijk het ons ook toeschijnt, we zullen moeten breken met secularisatie en humanisme.

Een gelijkenis

De gereedschappen van de Timmerman waren in conferentie. Broeder Hamer was voorzitter. De vergadering liet hem weten, dat hij heen moest gaan, omdat hij te luidruchtig was. Maar hij zei: "Als ik deze timmerwinkel moet verlaten, dan moet Boortje ook verdwijnen. Zij is zo onbetekenend dat zij heel weinig indruk maakt."

Zuster Boortje stond op en zei: "Goed, maar broeder Schroef moet ook gaan, je moet hem maar ronddraaien en ronddraaien om hem ergens te krijgen." Toen zei broeder

Schroef: "Als u dat werkelijk wilt, zal ik gaan, maar dan moet broeder Schaaf ook heengaan: hij werkt alleen maar aan de oppervlakte, daar zit geen diepgang in."

Daarop antwoorde broeder Schaaf: "Als ik mij terugtrek, moet broeder Duimstok hetzelfde doen, want hij is altijd bezig anderen de maat te nemen, alsof hij zelf alleen maar de juiste maat heeft."

Broeder Duimstok beklagde zich op zijn beurt over zuster Schuur-papier: "Zij is veel te ruw en altijd tegen de draad in."

Amerikaanse taal doorspekt met woorden en uitdrukkingen van Nederlandse origine

Er zullen slechts weinig mensen weten dat er in de Amerikaanse taal nogal wat woorden en uitdrukkingen voorkomen die direct uit het Nederlands afkomstig zijn. Om een voorbeeld te geven, het Amerikaanse woord 'Santa Claus' is een verbastering van het Nederlandse Sinterklaas en werd gedurende de zogenaamde Nieuw-Nederlandse periode in Amerika geïntroduceerd. 'Saint Nicolaas' is daar een variatie op. Verrassend is het ook om te weten dat het overbekende woord 'Yankee' afgeleid is van de naam Jan Kees of Jan Keese, de benaming van een Hollandse vrijbuiters. Later werd Yankee gebruikt als spotnaam voor handelaren uit de staat Connecticut. Een andere binding tussen Nederland en de Verenigde Staten is het feit dat de Amerikanen zonder het zich te realiseren elke dag Hollands voedsel gebruiken in de vorm van doughnuts. Van oorsprong was de doughnut een soort oliebol. De Pilgrim Fathers leerden tijdens hun ballingschap in Nederland (van 1608 tot 1620) hoe ze deze doughnuts moesten maken en namen dan ook het recept mee naar Nieuw-Engeland.

Ondertussen noemden de Hollanders deze bollen 'olykoek' en namen ze mee naar Nieuw-Amsterdam (later New York). Andere Amerikaanse woorden van Nederlandse herkomst zijn onder meer: coleslaw (koolsla), cook (koek, gebakje), to snoop (snoepen, in het geniep zoetigheid eten, gluren, spioneren) en waffle (wafel).

En hoeveel Amerikanen zullen weten dat het de Hollanders waren die hun de woorden hebben gegeven voor: boss (baas), clove (kloof, ravijn), dope (doop), dumb (dom), golf (kolf, slaghout), hook (hoek, landtong), kill (kil, kreek, kanaal), patron (patroon), skate (schaats), sleigh (slee), spook (spook, geest) en stoop (stoep).

Etymologen (Etymologie = deel van de taalwetenschap dat de herkomst, oorsprong en daarmee veelal ook de geschiedenis van woorden of woordgroepen onderzoekt.) halen nog meer woorden aan die oorspronkelijk afkomstig of afgeleid zijn uit het Nederlands. Enkele voorbeelden hiervan zijn: bedpan (beddepan), bedspread (beddesprei), bush (bos, woud), hunky (honk, de basis in kinderspelletjes), keelboat (kielboot), landscape (landschap) en a good scout (waarschijnlijk afgeleid van het woord schout).

Veder zijn er in de Amerikaanse taal nog de volgende benamingen te vinden: Dutch bake oven (Hollands fornuis), Dutch barn (Hollandse schuur), Dutch door (Hollandse deur in twee delen) en Dutch turnpike (een weg gemaakt van boomstammen en boomstronken over moerasachtige grond).

In tegenstelling tot het voorgaande wordt het woord tulip in de Verenigde Staten vaak als een oer-Hollands woord ervaren. Dat dit niet zo is zullen slechts weinig mensen weten. Tulp is afgeleid van het Turkse woord tuliband en het Perzische dulban (tulband). De tulp was vroeger een soort wilde ui die oorspronkelijk uit Azië afkomstig was en door de Nederlanders is gecultiveerd en tot een belangrijk exportartikel is gemaakt. De Hollanders waren trouwens wel de eersten die de tulp in Amerika introduceerden. Er zijn echter in het Amerikaans taalgebruik ook nogal wat uitdrukkingen te vinden die bij ons Nederlanders tamelijk spottend en denigrerend overkomen. Dit is een gevolg van de anti-Hollandse houding van de Engelsen ten tijde van de kolonisatie van de Nieuwe Wereld.

Tot slot van dit artikel wil de redactie de lezer enkele voorbeelden van deze gewraakte Amerikaanse gezegdes niet onthouden.

Dutch medley — deze uitdrukking wordt soms i.p.v. Dutch concert gebruikt, vooral wanneer het vocalen betreft.

En wat te denken van:

Dutch feast — een feest

Zo maar een Praatje ...

Herman de Jong

Bertus en Aaf wonen in een echt Ontario provincie stadje, waarvan er dertien in een dozijn gaan. De lange winkelstraat doubleert als hoofd- en doorgaand-verkeersweg.

Elke morgen wandel ik door de boomrijke zijstraten. Je moet toch iets te doen hebben. Bovendien gaat het op dokters advies. Het is plezierig wandelen meneer die, na mij hartelijk begroet te hebben, blijft staan om een praatje te maken. En ja hoor — ik zag het al aan zijn krachtige tred — deze meneer voelt met zijn tenen aan, dat elke morgenwandeling het tegenovergestelde doet van het roken van een pakje sigaretten per dag. Gelukkig voelt deze meneer niet hoe mijn warme pijp zich in mijn linker achterbroekzakje mijn linkerbil haast een brandblaas bezorgt. Meneer heet Bill.

nog een 'hardware store' bezat. (Kijk daar, wees hij) kreeg een Hollandse veeboer uit de omgeving een hartverlamming in zijn winkel. Hij was al gestorven voordat de ambulance arriveerde. Omdat deze man in Bill's winkel gestorven was, voelde Bill zich verplicht de begrafenisdienst bij te wonen. Nou, zo'n begrafenisdienst had Bill nimmer meegemaakt. Van heinde en ver kwamen de mensen. De veeboer had een grote familie en bovendien was hij een geziene figuur in het kerkelijk leven geweest. De grote parkeerplaats, prachtig asfalt, bood nauwelijks ruimte genoeg aan al de autos, die maar bleven komen

Tot Bill's grote verbazing maakte hij een normale kerkdienst mee. Er werd veel gezongen en de organist speelde niet extra zacht zoals de gewoonte was in zijn eigen Presbyteriaanse kerk. Ook merkte Bill dat de nabestaanden, hoewel erg bedroefd, kalm meezongen alsof ze speciale kracht ontvingen. Bill had eigenlijk een kort preekje verwacht van de nog jonge predikant. Ook dat was gewoonte in zijn eigen kerk. Maar deze dominee had werk van zijn preek gemaakt...

Zo'n prachtige preek had Bill in jaren niet gehoord. Omtrent de dertiger jaren hadden ze in zijn kerk een dominee gehad die ze preekte. Een dominee die sprak van zonde en genade. Een dominee die er op aandrong dat de kerkleden zich zouden bekeren. Maar deze dominee had niet lang kunnen blijven. Zijn preektrant paste immers niet in een "verlichte tijd?" De dominee kreeg een zenuwinstorting en vertrok met stille trom. Bill had hem node zien gaan. Waarom werden beide kerkdiensten zo druk bezocht? Was dat geen teken dat de gewone kerkleden geen stenen voor brood wensten?

Bill had zich nadien nooit kunnen verzoenen met liefelijke preekjes die kerkmensen in slaap susten en niet wezen op de rijke genade die Jezus door zijn kruisdood uitstortte over de wereld. Ondertussen was Bill ouderling geworden. Was hij nog, want in een Presbyteriaanse kerk ben je dat voor je leven. Ook werd hij, als bijna alle kleine zakenlui in het stadje lid van de vrijmetselaars. En nu... nu zat Bill in een Gereformeerde Kerk te luisteren naar een jonge dominee, die sprak van genade en troost. Met een gloeiend hoofd luisterde hij...

Van Halsema's Onthullingen

daar op zo'n warme Canadese herfstmorgen. Over enkele weken zal het groene loof veranderen in een wemeling van de prachtigste kleuren. Op bijzonder fijne wijze tovert God de warmste kleuren uit zijn palet alsof hij wilde dat die magnifieke kaleidoscoop zich scherp zou aftekenen in de gedachten van allen, die weggedoken in uitstekend geïsoleerde woningen, zich afvragen of er ooit een eind zal komen aan de barre winter.

Je zou zo denken dat er meer mensen wandelden. Maar, zoals elke morgen, is er geen kip op straat. Het is geen wonder dat er zoveel oude mensen in Nederland zijn. Wij doen daar veel aan de wandelsport om de hartspeer tot doorgaan te prikkelen.

Ik wandel nu al weken langs deze straten elke morgen, en nooit gebeurt er iets. Wonderlijk dat deze morgen een avontuurlijke uitblikker wordt. Kom ik daar eindelijk eens iemand tegen! Een oude

"Aangenaam," zeg ik, "my name is John." Gelukkig spreekt Bill zeer gedecideerd Engels, zodat ik hem uitstekend kan verstaan. Beiden dragen we een gehoorapparaat, maar ik merk al gauw dat mijn Duits apparaatje het beter doet dan de zijne. Bill neemt me mee naar een koffie salon, waar we fijn rustig kunnen praten, want ook daar is geen kip te bekennen.

Ons praatje draaide uit op een ernstig gesprek. Het was een waardevol gesprek omdat ik voor het eerst een Canadees ontmoette die op verstandige manier zijn visie gaf over Hollanders in Canada. Bill was op een bijzondere manier in aanraking gekomen met een Dutch-Canadian gemeenschap, en dat wel, nader bepaald, de leden ener Christian Reformed Church ter plaatse.

Dat zat zo... Enige jaren geleden, toen Bill

Een gelijkenis

... vervolg van pagina 18.

En terwijl ze aan het harrewarren waren, kwam de Timmerman van Nazareth binnen. De Timmerman ging naar de werkbank om een tafel te maken. Hij gebruikte de zaag, de hamer, het schuurpapier, het boortje, de schroef en alle andere gereedschappen. Aan het eind van de dag was de tafel klaar.

Toen Hij weer vertrokken was, stond zuster Zaag op en

zei: "Zusters en broeders, ik merk dat wij allen medewerkers van God zijn."

Velen van ons, Christenen, zijn precies als de gereedschappen. Wij maken ons druk over anderen omdat zij de dingen niet doen zoals wij denken dat ze het moeten doen. Toch weet de Meester elk van ons te gebruiken. De schaaf wordt niet als hamer gebruikt en de schroef niet als duimstok. Laten we dan maar heel voorzichtig zijn met het afkeuren van één van Gods gereedschappen. (Van het Jaarboekje 1985, Gereformeerde Kerk te Smilde).

Paulus en de Elfstedentocht

Als er in Paulus' dagen al een Elfstedentocht was geweest en de apostel van dat roemruchte evenement zou hebben gehoord, dan zou hij in één van zijn brieven ongetwijfeld een vergelijking hebben getrokken tussen het volgen van Christus en het rijden van een Elfstedentocht. Paulus werd het immers nooit moe om de broeders en zusters in de jonge christengemeenten aan te sporen tot volharding in het geloof. Hij gebruikte daarbij graag het beeld van de sportman (vrouwen telden toen nog niet mee op sportief gebied) die maar één doel voor ogen heeft: de wedloop of het gevecht winnen en met de erekrans om door de menigte worden toegejuicht. En zeg nou zelf, waar is dit beeld indringender aanwezig dan bij een Elfstedentocht? Als wij even terugdenken aan vorige week donderdag dan dringt de vergelijking met de levensreis van een christen zich van alle kanten op. Immers, als 't goed is staat ook op die levensreis, zoals bij de start van de wedstrijdrijders in de Frieslandhal, de blik op oneindig. De elfstedenrijder ontmoet op zijn schaatstocht langs de Friese steden allerlei gevaren en problemen: scheuren, wakken, kistwerken, bevroren ledematen, misf, sneeuwstormen en wat dies meer zij. Hij moet herhaaldelijk klunen en z'n uiterste reserves aanspreken om vol te houden.

Tijdens de lange en barre tocht zijn er heel wat deelnemers, die de moed opgeven en de eindstreep niet halen. En van degenen, die het zoet der volbrenging wel mogen smaken, glijden velen volledig uitgeput en moegestreden over de finish. Maar daarna mogen zij delen in de eer en de roem van de vedetten en de ploeters, die het felbegeerde kruisje ook hebben veroverd.

Herkent u zichzelf een beetje in dit beeld van de elfstedenrijder? Bunyan schilderde het al in zijn beroemde boek 'Pilgrim's Progress': de reis van de christen naar de hemel gaat door velerlei gevaren en verzoeken heen. Ach ja, er zijn ook christenen, die met groot gemak en soepele slag de eindstreep halen. Zij weten de lastige obstakels onderweg te omzeilen en het klunen gaat hen vlot af.

Se hawwe it yn streken.

Maar de levensbaan van verweg de meesten onzer zit vol barsten en scheuren. En wat moet er soms veel gekluund worden! Er vallen mensen uit, die voor ons uit rijden.

Maar ook achter ons zijn er die afhaken.

Wij komen onszelf herhaaldelijk tegen, vooral op het laatste traject, waarop velen in het donker van de levensavond alleen voortschuifelen.

Maar zoals de elfstedenrijders worden bemoedigd en voortgestuwd door het enthousiaste publiek dat langs de kant staat te juichen en te klappen, zo mag de christen zich op zijn moeizame reis naar de eeuwigheid, telkens als hij zichzelf in z'n gebrekkigheid tegenkomt, laten inspireren tot volharding door de wolk van getuigen, die Paulus aan de Hebreëen voorbij laat trekken.

Te midden van zo'n grote kring van geloofsgetuigen, zegt Paulus, moeten we met volharding de renbaan aflopen die voor ons ligt, het oog gericht houdend op Jezus. Paulus wist wat er in zijn tijd op sportief gebied te koop was. Hij verstond de kunst om die kennis dienstbaar te maken aan de verkondiging van het evangelie.

Is er al gepreekt over de Elfstedentocht?

Building on the rock

Rev. Henry Van Andel

The fore-knowledge of the father

Your Father knows that you need them all.
Matthew 6:32b

This is a very comforting word. While we mention all our needs and troubles in our prayers, laying them before the throne of God, we may be convinced that the Father knew them already. They were known to Him before we started to pray.

If we ponder on this, then there are three things which we must remember.

First, this fore-knowledge of the Father does not make our prayers superfluous. The main purpose of our prayers is not to make known to God what we need, but to recognize Him as the Giver of all things. God wants us to pray. By prayer we honour and adore Him as our Creator and Provider.

Secondly, we must remember that the Father — according to our text — knows what we need. This may differ from what we desire in our prayers. Desire and need are not the same. We must leave it in God's hands to determine what we need, trusting that if He does not fulfil our desires, He undoubtedly will meet our needs.

And in the third place, God's fore-knowledge is not only foresight, but also provision. His fore-knowledge includes all the ways and means through which He will help us.

The most important way by which He will take care of us was the sending of His Son Jesus Christ. At that time already the Father knew what we needed. In Christ He provided for us not only forgiveness of sins and a renewal of life, but also the necessities for our temporary life.

We think of Paul's beautiful statement: "He who did not spare His own Son, but gave Him up for us all, will He not also give us all things with Him."

Divine Healing Today.

Mayhue Richard. Moody Press. Chicago, 1983; 158 pages. Jenny Oldengarm, Harriston, Ont.

With the increased interest in miraculous healing, there is also confusion about whom and what to believe about this phenomenon. The author deals with the problem of sickness and suffering and states that it is a misunderstanding that a loving God does not allow suffering to occur. With many Biblical references he shows that many of God's people did suffer, and, with one exception, all of them died. Miraculous healings which did take place in the Old Testament times and during Jesus' time, ended with the apostolic age.

There are many reasons why people may believe that miraculous healing has taken place.

For example, the body has a natural healing capacity, the wrong diagnosis may have been made, there may be deliberate fraud, or there is the possibility of emotionally induced illness.

The biggest problem of humanity is sin. True believers are assured the forgiveness of sins, but not necessarily good health. Physical healing and wholeness will take place when our bodies have been redeemed. The author urges caution when faced with reports of miraculous healings through human agents. In the Old and New Testament there were both miracles of benefit and punishment. To believe one makes it necessary to believe the other. Satan is clever, and out to deceive believers. (If you pray enough, all will be well). Faith cannot be measured quantitatively; therefore, to suggest that healing takes place according to the amount or vigour of prayer is deceptive. In fact, some of the recipients of healing in the Bible did not demonstrate faith (Naaman).

There is no biblical basis for miraculous healing through a human healer today. Medical technology and skills of doctors and nurses have been given to us by God to be used and blessed by Him.

This book is divided into short chapters, each dealing with some aspect of healing. Many biblical references are supplied. The reading list at the end of the book is helpful for anyone who wishes to find out more about this subject. The book should be read with careful attention to the interpretation of the Biblical references. For example, the author interprets Isaiah 35:4 and 5 to refer to millennial conditions. This is a thought-provoking and worthwhile book to read, but keep in mind the author's frame of reference.
